I submit that the Great Barrier Reef is extremely valuable both economically [Tourism, fishery breeding grounds] & environmentally for the health of the oceans. We must insist on rigorous management & guidelines to be placed on any & every activity that can potentially impact it. To not do so is to cut off our noses to spite our face. In other words allow short term gain to outweigh long term benefits. It would be absolute stupidity. It is time that our government showed wisdom & foresight & stopped bowing to short term corporate greed.

Yours Sincerely
John Morison
